2. Who can certify the copy? A Solicitor or member of An Garda Síochána or certified broker.

3. Why is this required? By disclosing basic identification information and keeping this information up to date, a customer helps to ensure that his or her account is secure. By seeking customer information and keeping the information up to date, financial firms are ensuring that proper Anti-Money Laundering (AML) controls are in place and are preventing the Irish financial system from being used for money laundering. If a customer does not disclose relevant information required by law, a financial firm is obliged under the AML laws to cease providing services to that customer and may ultimately have to discontinue the business relationship.
4. Group Life Claims are paid only to the policyholder per the policy schedule.
5. Dependant's pensions are paid directly to the surviving dependants monthly.
6. Where the dependant is not a child, spouse or civil partner - a copy of current scheme rules and details of the trustee's investigations where they have established financial dependency in accordance with the scheme rules will be required.
